An interesting slide presentation followed on how the Internet can hugely influence the Organic Industry by linking together people who can change Indonesia ... from small organic farmers and growers to consumers and entrepreneurs.

With the help of these dedicated entrepreneurs, the Internet is making an appearance in Developing Countries, such as Uganda and making a visible difference. The Internet allows growers/farmers to check prices, improve output and stay in touch with other organic enterprises.

The World Bank stated: "Continuing along our current path is NOT an option."
